VOLUME 25 | Entered at the Post Office at Janesville Wis., as second-class matter. | JANESVILLE, WISCONSIN, MONDAY, MARCH 13, 1882. | Published Every Evening Except Sunday, at $7 a Year. | NUMBER 312

It is feared that the bill to appropriate $200,000 for the building of an additional room for the State Historical Society and Supreme Court room, will be defeated. There is an objection to another State building, or if one must be built, there are some who claim that it should be an asylum for the insane.

The Milwaukee Sunday Telegraph says: "Hon. E. W. Keyes, of Madison, a man who knows more Wisconsin men, personally, than any other man in the State, was in the city yesterday and last evening. He is looking splendidly after two months of activity in the Legislature. By the way, his speech in favor of appropriating $2,000 to the widow of the late sheriff Charles Coleman, of Durand, is spoken of as one of the finest efforts of the present session."

The public will regard the sentence of Sergeant John A. Mason, who attempted to shoot Guiteau, as an outrage. The court martial condemned him to be dishonorably discharged from the army, with loss of all pay and allowance, and to be confined at hard labor in the penitentiary at Albany for eight years. General Hancock has approved the finding of the court, and next it will be submitted to the President. The severity of the finding of the court is to carry out the red tape policy of the army. There is no doubt Sergeant Mason did wrong in shooting at Guiteau, but the worst thing he did was in not taking better aim and finishing the job at once. There is hardly any one who will countenance disorderly conduct in the army, or who will uphold the taking of the law in one's own hands, but at that time public sentiment ran high against Guiteau and there was a general expression all over the country that the assassin should be shot. The terrible crime committed appalled the Nation and the spirit of vengence seized hold of the people, and giving way to such a feeling, Mason made a shot at Guiteau and unfortunately missed him. In view of these facts, the judgment of the court martial will be considered too severe, and it is hoped that the President will modify the finding so that the imprisonment will not be inflicted. It would be nothing less than an outrage to carry out that portion of the finding.

MR. BENNETT FOR CIRCUIT JUDGE.

The Gazette publishes to-day a call signed by sixty-five members of the bar of the Twelfth judicial circuit, and several hundred other voters, asking John R. Bennett, Esq., of this city, to become an independent candidate for the position of circuit judge in place of His Honor, Judge Conger, whose term will expire with the close of 1882. Mr. Bennett's acceptance is also published, and will be found elsewhere in this issue of the Gazette.

It will afford the electors of the Twelfth circuit the highest satisfaction to vote for Mr. Bennett for the position he has been called to become an independent candidate. He is among the most prominent and deeply esteemed members of the bar in Southern Wisconsin. He has been a practitioner in the Rock county circuit for thirty-four years, and during that time has occupied a foremost position, and has gained the abiding confidence and the profound respect of not only his brother members of the bar, but of the people throughout the circuit, and especially in Rock county, where is known so well and his ability and worth are appreciated. That he will be elected, there is no question. Practically there will be no organized opposition to him, as any movement to throw the judicial question into politics, will not be endorsed by any considerable number of the voters of the circuit.

We trust the voters of the entire circuit, regardless of party affilitaions, will give Mr. Bennett that hearty support his fitness demands. He has that unspotted character, that legal learning and experience, and that judicial mind which naturally designate a judge, and the question of his election should not be narrowed down to politics.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY BILL.

MADISON, March 12.—The fate of the Historical Society bill, so-called, the importance of which is generally admitted, is surrounded with doubt. Several members, with Mr. Price leading, have announced their opposition to the plan for another state building. They reason that there is no necessity pressing for its erection. The Society and the Supreme Court have got along apparently all right in their present quarters, and can continue to do so for a while longer, until the state gets out of debt. The state is now liable for the annual interest on two millions of dollars borrowed from the trust funds, and must this year Equidate the balance due on account of the war debt. In addition there are the running expenses of the State Gouernment and its various institutions, all combining to swell the annual state tax, at which the freeholder growls. The cost of building material is very high now, and the appropriation required is therefore large—$200,000. Furthermore, the opinion prevails with some that if another state building is to be erected, it should be for the use of the insane now confined in jails and poorhouses.

Mr. J. Marsh, Bank of Toronto, Ont., writes: "Billiousness and dyspepsia seem to have grown up with me; having been a sufferer for years, I have tried many remedies, but with no lasting result until I used your BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. They have been truly a blessing to me, and I cannot speak too highly of them." Price $1.00, trial size 10 cents.

THE OREGON ENCOUNTER.

SAN FRARCISCO, Cal., March 12.—A Jacksonville (Oregon) special says: "Last night ten or twelve masked men rode into Linkville, where H. C. Laws, charged with murder, was in custody of Deputy Sheriff J. F. Lewis and Justice Wright, awaiting examination. The officers were in Greenman's hotel with the prisoner when the lynchers entered, and were ordered to halt. The lynchers refused, and Lewis fired his revolver, wounding one of the party slightly. The lynchers returned the fire, killing the Deputy Sheriff and wounding Justice Wright. They then left without taking Laws. Excitement is intense."

OMAHA.

OMAHA, March 12.—Colonel Colby, of the State National Guard, arrived this morning with nine companies of militia on a special train. Captain Emil Adams brought up four companies of United States troops from Sidney, and Major Gentry marched in three companies of the Ninth United States Infantry, and one company of sharpshooters from Fort Omaha, with a Gatling gun and mountain howitzer. The laborers were brought back from Plattsmouth and set at work at noon under this protection the soldiers guarding the ground and approaches. Additional laborers will be put on grading on Monday, and work in the smelting works resumed then. Sheriff Miller arrested Barney Shannon and W. A. Fonda this evening, on a charge of assault with intent to kill, and they were admitted to bonds in $1,000. Governor Nance and staff arrived this evening.

AN 1864 INCIDENT.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—The following is related by a prominent ex-Union general as a piece of unwritten history in connection with the revival of the Rosecrans letter. It brings to the surface a hitherto forgotten fact, which will tend to strengthen the well known friendship and affection which existed between the two. It will be remembered that General Garfield was a delegate from Ohio in 1864 to the Baltimore convention, and nominated President Lincoln for his second term. After Lincoln had been nominated Garfield telegraphed to Rosecrans, then in St. Louis, as follows:

"Vice Presidency going a-begging. Will you accept?"

General Rosecrans, after consultation with a well-known general, now in Washington, consented, and sent an answer to General Garfield, which, it is said, was suppressed by Stanton in the war department, through whose hands all telegrams at that time went. As a consequence, Andrew Johnson received the nomination which General Rosecrans would unquestionably have secured, and the following event of Lincoln's death would have placed him in the presidential chair, which subsequently was filled by Johnson.

The system of espionage in the war department at that time brought the train of disasters which followed under the Johnson regime, and which might happily have been averted in the placing of Garfield's friend Rosecrans in the prefidential chair.

Grateful Women

None receive so much benefit, and none are so profoundly grateful and show such an interest in recommending Hop Bitters as women. It is the only remedy peculiarly adapted to the many ills the sex is almost universally subject to. Chills and fever, indigestion or deranged liver, constant or periodical sick headaches, weakness in the back or kidneys, pain in the shoulders and different parts of the body, a feeling of lassitude and despondency, are all readily removed by these Bitters.

THE WHISKY MEN.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—The whisky men of Cincinnati, St. Louis, New York Louisville, and other leading cities will gather here in force this week. Colonel Moulton, of the first named city, and Mr. Sherley, of Louisville, arrived to-day, and Mr. Stagg has been here several days. Colonel Moulton said to-night that he felt certain that the committee of ways and means would soon report a measure looking to a material reduction in the whisky tax, though, possibly, not such a reduction as the distillers and others in the trade desire. The representatives of the whisky interests will be before the committee this week.

GENTLEMEN:—I have received your call, requesting me to become a candidate at the next Judicial election, for the office of Circuit Judge of the Twelfth Judicial Circuit of this State. Signed, as it is, by most of the entire Bar of the Circuit, without whose support I could not have consented to be a candidate, and by the principal business men in the city that has been my residence so long, and whose support is equally appreciated and weighty; and numerously signed also by other electors, without distinction of party, throughout the Circuit, whose support is esteemed a high honor, I do not feel at liberty to decline, and therefore accept the call.

With the greatest respect, I remain your obedient servant,

JUDGE CONGER DECLINES.

To the Electors of the 12 Judicial Circuit of the State of Wisconsin:

My term of office, as judge of this circuit, will expire on the last day of December of the present year, after two elections without opposition, and twelve years of continuous service. For the term commencing January 1st, 1883, an election is to be held in the coming month of April; and in view of the fact that friends in different parts of the circuit have proffered aid to present me as a candidate for the suffrages of the electors for re-election, and have requested that I become such a candidate, I have thought it due to them and all others who might regard me as a possible candidate, that I relieve them from all embarrassment as respects their action in the premises, by publicly, at this early day, announcing that I am not and shall not be a candidate for re-election.

I beg leave to add that, at no time during my past eleven years of service on the bench, have I thought that a third election would be desirable, under any circumstances; and never, more than at the present time, have I looked forward to emancipation from official duty and responsibility with greater pleasure.

H. A. PATTERSON, P. M.

TO HIM WHO MARRIES.

Do not take a wife too young,
When a wife you choose to take;
She will wield a thoughtless tongue
And a world of trouble make.

If you choose a handsome wife,
Ills unthought of will betide;
You will lose the peace of life,
And suffer from her haughty pride.

Do not take a wife too low—
Far beneath your own estate—
For the friends you used to know
Will not enter through your gate.

Neither seek a wife too rich,
Unless your fortitude is rare,
For she will not delve or stitch,
But she will the scepter bear!

Bright and modest, neat and kind,
Let the wife you look for be;
If this one you chance to find,
All the world may envy thee.

But should you get a scolding wife,
All your sweetest joys would pail;
You would grieve, amidst the strife,
That you took a wife at all.

Jennie's Graduation Dress.

"Now, go on with your study, Jennie. It's useless to discuss the matter."

"But mother, I don't see—"

"Of course you don't see, dear, but when your father has decided, he has decided, you know. Don't think any more about it. Come, I can't spare you but fifteen minutes more. You must help me on Johnny's jacket—just the buttonholes, my eyes are so poor."

"Why don't you get Miss Stitchson to make the buttonholes?"

"Don't ask me. What did your father say yesterday noon, and again just now at supper time? If you will make them I can get the jacket finished to-night. He needs it enough."

"Now, mother Mayberry, it's too bad! Tom's suit is shabby, but I don't believe he cares. One day more won't make much difference, any way; and I will help on the buttonholes to-morrow afternoon if Prudy don't come for me to practice that duet for her."

"No, my dear. 'Never put off till to-morrow what can be done to-day'—Grandma's motto, you know, I wish you would bear it in mind more than you do. There—now you mustn't say another word—keep your thoughts on your lesson. I shan't speak for fifteen minutes."

At this Jennie resumed studying, for she was as desirous as her mother was for her to be correct in recitations. She has been dreading this last review in history, which was to determine her rank in scholarship. After her father was anxious that she should stand high at graduation—only three weeks hence—he had even taken pains to go over with her all the battles of the rebellion and the events of the Franco-German war, dates were such trouble to her; and taught her an old method of his own for memorizing such things accurately.

She went on patiently with the words of the book. But I am sorry to say her thoughts wandered to Prudence Winn's new dress, and to a small package in her pocket which she had not yet had the courage—opportunity, she would have said, to show her mother; yet which she must see this very evening if her long cherished hopes were to be fulfilled.

A pencil was needed to mark the battle of the Wilderness from her memorizing method, and in taking it from her pocket out came the package. Her pink cheeks took on a deeper hue as she hastily snatched at it before it fell to the floor, and there was a confused droop of her quivering eyelids before her mother's questioning glance. Not a word was said, but Mrs. Mayberry extended her hand, and Jennie dare not ignore the unspoken request.

"What does this mean, daughter? Jordan & Marsh's shop bill—black silk—samples!" said Mrs. Mayberry, slowly, as she unfolded the little package.

"I wanted to know what it would cost," came the reluctant words, as the girl's nervous fingers turned and returned the pages of her history. "Other girl's, lots of them, do."

"Do what?"

"Send for samples."

"Without consulting their parents? I hope not, Jennie. How could you?"

There was no answer, and the question was repeated. But before she had time to reply Mr. Mayberry and Tommy—who had been busy over an hour in the barn looking after the comfort of the little heifer and Nan, her mother, and seeing that Jenks, the old roan, and Daisy, the pony, were all right, and everything about the premises snug and orderly—came hurriedly in.

Mr. Mayberry, quick to read faces, saw that something unpleasant was under consideration. Presuming it was the same—graduation and expenses—which had been talked over at tea time, he said: "I've been thinking it all over, Jennie. I can't bear to have you feel unhappy and dissatisfied and instead of giving money for hiring music that day and evening I'll let the class have the use of our piano—you and Prudie Winn can play well enough for anybody who will be there. How do you like that? I'll take it to the school-house and back, too."

Jennie did not answer. She had recovered from her confusion, and only a sickly smile showed that she had understood his suggestion.

"A good idea—don't you think so, mother?" he added, with a little chirruppy laugh, which Mrs. Mayberry answered with another—but her's was forced and hollow.

Tommy saw the samples of silk, still in his mother's hand. "Something for my new jacket trimmings, is it!" he asked.

"Oh, no; Jenny, you might as well tell your father about it," was the response, in low, sad tones.

Jenny began to cry.

"Hi! hi!" said her father, cheerfully; "this won't do for a seventeen-year-old young lady. What's up? I don't see anything to cry about. You're getting nervous, sis. Too much study, I'm afraid. I shall be glad when you get through this terrible last term. But you're coming out well—that's not the trouble, I hope? Let's run over the battles again, so as to be sure of them." And he took up the book which she had pushed aside.

Mrs. Mayberry laid the strips of silk upon the book. "What do you think of those?" she asked, gently.

"Those?" he asked. "Why, what are they? How came you by them?"

"Is it best for Jennie to have a graduation suit like either of them?"

"Our Jennie? Good grandmother of Methuselah! Our Jennie rigged out like a fifty-year-old? You're joking, wife!"

Jennie had ceased crying and now looked up anxiously.

"Never was I more in earnest, John."

"Well, I don't pretend to know about these things. But you don't really want it, do you, child? Such a gloomy thing. Why, you ought to have something bright and cheerful then, it seems to me."

"It would be very serviceable," said Jennie, meekly.

"Serviceable—how?" queried her father. "Your mother's dresses are always serviceable—and they are not silk. And then look at the cost of it. Whew! Ten—fifteen dollars, I suppose."

"More than double that," returned Mrs. Mayberry.

"That settles the question. No, it will not be serviceable for my daughter—not at that price."

"But if I get the school at Stapleton?" asked Jennie.

"Ah! If! Time enough to talk about silk dresses when you've money that you don't know what to do with. If you do teach, you shan't begin for over a year."

"More than half the girls in our class will have silks for graduation, Pruey says, and—"

"I suppose she will; she looks like that kind of a girl. And, as usual, her father is going to borrow my mowing machine next summer, and the new plow I must buy in April. No, no daughter—no black silk for you yet. However—let me see. I have it now! One of my happy thoughts—just in the nick of time, I declare!"

He drew out his pocket-book, and from its folds took several bank bills. "Mr. Simonds paid for his hay this afternoon. I'm right glad to get the money just now—was intending it for a certain purpose, a plan your mother and I made a while ago. But I've changed my mind within an hour, and, Jennie, if you will wear the same dress you have on now—the neat gray flannel with the pretty pink neck-tie—at the graduation, you shall have every cent he paid me—to spend as you choose."

Jennie looked troubled.

"I'll be there to see," he added. "Moreover and likewise," he continued merrily, "Tommy and I will get as many spruce trees and as much evergreen to trim the school room as you will accept. And mother'll lend all her plants, every flower-pot, I've no doubt."

"Certainly, with pleasure," responded Mrs. Mayberry.

"The graduation, or commencement, rather—for then you will really begin your life as a woman," say Mr. Mayberry, ought to be a joyful occasion. And yet a serious and thoughtful one, as you then lay aside childish things and take the first step toward the sober realities of life. And I want you to know, Jennie, that the first step will have much to do in determining your future course. Don't begin with show and extravagance then—even if you—that is, I—can afford it; it would not be right or becoming.

"Mike Brady hasn't any overcoat, father, because Mary's got to have a new gown to graduate in," said Tommy.

"And Mrs. Drayton told me a fortnight ago that Hannah had left the high school on account of the expense of graduation," said his mother.

"Well, I suppose there are others in the same box," as Uncle Russell expresses it. He said to me the other day that he should not be able to take up his note as soon as he expected, next month; his two boys' school expenses are so great this last term."

"All the girls are telling what they shall wear, and I thought—I expected—" began Jennie in a trembling voice.

Her father interrupted her, placing the bank bills in her hand.

"Think it over to-night, dear. You have had good teachers and you are fond of them, I know, and are attached to your mates; have had many happy hours in the old school-room; will wish to look back on the last days spent in there with pleasant memories. Spend the money—it is yours now—in a way that will give you the most delightful recollection."

"Now, please, let us drop the subject," said her mother, laying the samples on her work-stand, and taking up Tommy's jacket. "Am I to have your help on the button-holes, dear?" she added, quietly.

Jennie gave her a bright smile, gathered up the bits of silk, went directly to the stove and threw them in the fire.

"Buttonholes, buttons—anything you say," was her answer, as she seated herself on a stool at her mother's side, that both might sew at the same time.

"How about your battles? Dates all right, daughter?" asked her father. "Let me hear them."

She recited them slowly and correctly, ending with a gay laugh, and—"I was determined to have them right."

"And you have succeeded. Add another—a victory for General Good-Sense at Mayberry point. What's the date?"

"Never mind. Graduation day, we'll call it, perhaps," and having clapsed her purse with a vigorous snap, there was a twinkle of its steel rings as she slipped it into her pocket; and then her skillful fingers ran rapidly through the mazes of buttonhole stitches. So Tommy's jacket was completed, and he was glad enough to have it ready to wear the next day.

Graduation day was remarkably fair for March. The school-room was crowded with the parents and friends of the pupils. Everybody admired the decorations of evergreen and flowering plants, which Mr. Mayberry not only provided, but assisted in arranging.

Not one of the pupils passed more creditably through the exercises than Jenny Mayberry, and certainly not one looked prettier than she in her modest gray dress, with a pink bow at her throat. More than one among the gentlemen visitors inquired who that handsome girl in gray was—"And such easy, charming manners," added some. "And such a fine scholar," said others.

The music—only Jenny Mayberry's piano and singing by the pupils—was liked so well that a persistent encore of the last song brought its repetition, during which Mr. Mayberry, bearing a large package, passed slowly up one of the crowded aisles to the teachers' platform. When the singing ceased, all eyes turned in expectation toward him as he carefully unfolded a large picture from it wrappings.

It was a fine engraving, a portrait of Abraham Lincoln, in a beautiful frame. "My daughter's gift to the school, in memory of the pleasant hours here passed," said Mr. Mayberry to the principal.

A complete surprise was this, and everybody seemed astonished at the generous gift. In a few words Mr. Mayberry told the story of its purchase. Then it was hung on the wall back of the teacher's desk.

And that is the way that the change in the graduation exercises of the High School at Mayberry Point was brought about, and why the pupils wear their every-day dresses, and furnish their own music, and make the decorations themselves for that occasion. The reason, too, that there is always such a large class to graduate, and that there is less love of dress and finery among the young people of the place, and such good books in its school library, and so many pictures on the school-room walls, and those two Rogers' groups in corners.—New England Farmer.

Scale of Titles.

A writer in Chambers' Journal, who has traveled in the Western States, has discovered the scale by which titles are given:

A speaker at an American "Convention," being addressed as "Colonel," declared he was not even a captain.

"Don't you live in Missouri?" he asked.

He owned that he did, and in a house with two chimneys.

"Then I was right," exclaimed the man. "Over there, if a man has three chimneys on his house, he's a general; if two, he's a colonel; if only one, he's a major, and if he lives in a dug-out and has no chimney, he's a captain, anyhow."

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1876, I was taken with a VIOLENT BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS, followed by a severe cough. I soon began to lose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when, to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it, so that every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will be induced take DR WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles, and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared, and I shall soon be able to go to work." Sold by druggists. 1

The Wagon-Load of Bread.

A party of soldiers, during the late civil war, found themselves one night on a battle-field in charge of a great many wounded soldiers, who, by reason of the sudden retreat of the army, were left wholly without shelter or supplies. Having done their best for the poor fellows—bringing them water from a distant brook, and searching the harversacks of the dead for rations—they began to say to themselves and to one another: "These weak and wounded men must have food or they will die. The army is out of reach, and there is no village for many miles; what are we to do?"

"Pray to God to send us bread," said one.

That night, in the midst of the dead and dying, they held a little prayer-meeting, telling the Lord all about the case, and begging Him to send them bread immediately; though from whence it could come they had not the most remote idea. All night long they plied their work for mercy. With the first ray of dawn the sound of an approaching wagon caught their ears; and presently, through the mists of the morning, appeared a great Dutch farm wagon, piled to the very top with loaves of bread.

On asking the driver where he came from, and who sent him, he replied: "When I went to bed last night I knew that the army was gone, and I could not sleep for thinking of the poor fellows who always have to stay behind. Something seemed to say to me: 'What will those peor fellows do for something to eat?' It came to me so strong that I waked up my old wife, and told her what was the matter. We had only a little bread in the house, and while my wife was making some more I took my team and went round to all my neighbors, making them get up and give me all the bread in their houses, telling them it was for the wounded soldiers on the battle field. When I got home my wagon was full; my wife piled her baking on the top, and I started off to bring the bread to the boys, feeling just as if the Lord Himself were sending me." Kind Words.

Population from Abroad.

The population of the United States was increased about one per cent. last year by immigration from abroad. Statistics are not at hand for other ports than New York, but the total number of arrivals was probably something over half a million. About 440,000 immigrants arrived at this port, or nearly nine-tenths of the whole number. The general character of the arrivals is said to be better than the average of previous years. On the whole there is no doubt that the addition to our population is of real value. Considerably more than one-third of the immigrants landing at Castle Garden were Germans, a very large proportion of whom were industrious and frugal agricultural laborers, seeking homes in the West. This class, as a whole, constitutes an orderly and law-abiding element which is readily and rapidly assimilated. The Irish come next in order of numbers, but were only about one-third as numerous as the Germans. They furnish a valuable working force, though they are rather addicted to congregating in the cities. The English come next to the Irish in numbers, and, notwithstanding their attachment to inherited ideas, they almost invariably become good citizens of our free Republic. Those who come over for the purpose of establishing themselves in colonies are, indeed, of a rather superior class, and the fact that they are of the same blood with the founders of the first colonies on these shores gives promise of a ready assimilation with the descendants of their own ancestors. Sweden has contributed more than 35,000 to the arrivals, and Norway has added about 14,000. They are for the most part an industrious and peaceable people, and much the same may be said of the Scotch and Welsh. The most undesirable of our immigrants in recent years have come from the South of Europe, and of these the Italians are most numerous, nearly 14,000 of whom arrived at Castle Garden during the year past. They are very apt to herd together in the large cities and recruit the lowest ranks of the laboring population. This is due in some measure to the fact that the emigration of criminals and paupers and worthless people generally from Italy has been rather encouraged of late. The hordes of Asia poured in upon our Eastern shores to the number of something less than 400, all told, but San Francisco and the Pacific coast are yet to be heard from.

Not only has the addition to our population from abroad been valuable in itself, but with it has come a moderate accession of accumulated capital. The amount of this can not be ascertained, as the immigrants are under no obligation to tell how much money they have, and most of them make their exchanges on the other side before embarking. It is estimated that they paid $5,000,000 last year for railroad transportation after leaving Castle Garden, and the Superintendent believes that the total amount of cash brought with them was not less than $11,000,000. This is probably a very low estimate. The destination of the immigrant is no less interesting than their origin. They still flock in large numbers to the Northwest, where many settle on farms and aid in developing the untouched resources of the land, thereby aiding in the most effective manner to increase the production of wealth as well as the population of our country. Others seek mining and manufacturing districts on account of the character of their previous industrial experience. Those who sink to the bottom of the social strata in the cities and become a source of trouble probably form no larger proportion of the whole than that of natives of foreign parentage who find the same level. The capacity of the Southern States for absorbing foreign immigrants has not yet been fairly tested, though many are seeking the vast unsettled areas of Texas, and the current is gradually percolating into other parts of that section of the country.

The idea that the "foreign element" is a source of danger or difficulty to the country is well-nigh exploded now, though there is no doubt that it adds to the perplexity of securing good government under universal suffrage in the large cities. This is not due so much to the fact that so many voters are of foreign birth as to the fact that so many of the foreigners who seek the cities and remain there are of a low order of intelligence and education.

There is certainly nothing alarming even to the most timid in the great flow of population from abroad which has been going on during the last two years. Though unprecedented in absolute volume it bears a constantly decreasing proportion to the entire population. According to the census of 1880 we had then 6,679,943 foreigners in a population of 50,155,783, or less than one-twelfth of the whole. The increase of population for the preceding decade was about thirty per cent., or an average of three per cent. a year, and even in 1881 the accession from abroad was only about one per cent. Considering this fact and the rapid transformation which is constantly going on, as well as the general good quality of nine-tenths of the immigration, there is certainly a very large percenage of grain for us as a Nation in the increment to our population that comes from over the seas.—N. Y. Times.

Kissing Under the Mistletoe.

A writer in the London Daily Telegraph, conversing with a street-vender of imitated holly in Christmas week, asked him whether the mistletoe, of which a plentiful supply was in the market, was ever sold with artificial berries. "There's a lot of rubbish talked about mistletoe," said he; "and I dare say it's very pretty to read about it in Christmas tales and to see it in Christmas pictures, but poor people don't care anything about it. It's all very well, perhaps, among the well-to-do sort of people, who can afford to invite old and young to all manner of gay goings-on, but among them that are always working and driving for a living, they got something else to think about when they get a chance of a bit of a jollification." But even among the humblest of the laboring classes the young fellows have sweethearts, and at their Christmas parties kissing under the mistletoe is surely part of the fun. "Well, that's where it is, perhaps," returned the old fellow, after a few moments' reflection, "the young fellows don't see the fun of it. They do their courting steadfast and with a hearty will, just in a manner of speaking as they set about the work they get a living by. And when a young fellow tacks on to a young gal, meaning to marry her, he doesn't usually see the force of being so very polite as to let another young fellow kiss her just because he's got a sprig of mistletoe in his hand or catches her passing under a bit of it hung up. It might go down in company where they practices genteel manners," said Bill's father, "but in homely circles like them round about the New Cut and Lambeth Walk, a young fellow who tried it on would most likely get his head punched, which, of course, would make a disturbance and spoil the harmony. No, sir, it isn't in poor neighborhoods that mist'etoe is much sought after. When there's a glut of it, and you can buy a good-sized bush for about sixpence, it will sell in the Cut and such market places, but there isn't a hundredth part the hankering after it among poor people there is for holly."

The Mysterious Adirondack Monument.

About two months ago there was a paragraph going the rounds of the papers to the effect that a historic monument of a "prehistoric race" had been discovered in the township of Saranac, on the eastern border of the Adirondack Wilderness. It was stated that Mr. C. O. Gott, of Fitchburg, Mass., while on a trip to the Adirondacks last summer, found this singular stone, three and a half feet long and one foot wide, bearing strange characters, said to resemble those found on ancient Phœnician monuments, and bought it from the man who originally discovered it in the wilderness twenty-eight years ago. Having frequently visited the Adirondacks, and explored the rocks of Saranac somewhat, and having remained as ignorant of the existence of this lithoglyphite as the "innocents abroad" were of the legend that "Columbus discovered America," we had doubts. We wrote to Mr. Gott, from whom we received a handsome photograph of the stone, cabinet size, accompanied with the certificate of its pedigree by its original discover and a letter from Mr. Gott in forming us how his attention happened to be called to it. He says: "I was in Dannemora about the last week in September, and while strolling along the street my attention was attracted to his peculiar stone, which was at the time resting against one of the pillars, or posts, of the piazza of the house where the man lived who found it twenty-eight years ago. I looked it over carefully, and then sought out the man, who was husking corn in his barn. He told me he had been offered various sums of money for the stone, but had always refused to sell it. I finally took out a certain sum, and told him to take his choice—the money or the stone. After a little hesitation he accepted my offer, and I took the stone. I inclose a photograph of it, showing the inscription, or lettering, undoubtedly done by some extinct race that were able to read and write characters which we can not decipher at present." The following is the certificate of the discoverer, a veteran of sixty-four years, with whom we are well acquainted, and one of those honest-hearted, truthful old woodsmen for which the Saranac Valley is noted. Read the certificate:

DANNEMORA, N. Y., Sept. 27, 1881.

This is to certify that about 28 years ago, while clearing land on my own premises, in the Township of Saranac, N. Y., which was then a dense wilderness, my attention was called to this peculiar monument. It was facing the east, and about one foot and a half of it appeared above the ground at the time. I carefully removed it to my house, where it has been exposed to the weather ever since. Mr. Gott's liberal offer has induced me to give it up for investigation to the scientific world.

J. J. MEADER.

The material, Mr. Gott tells us, is a very hard sandstone, and though evidently much of it has been worn away by the action of the elements the carving is still deep and well-defined. That it is the work of human hands there can be no doubt, but what can have been the object of the sculptor who chiseled it is more than we can guess. There is nothing in the character of the figures to indicate to us that it has any significance, and yet it is the product of more labor than men are apt to perform without a powerful incentive.—Canton (N. Y.) Advertiser.

Staving Off a Run.

In times of severe panic people have been known to refuse Bank of England notes and prefer local notes. In country districts of Scotland the old one-pound notes were greatly preferred to sovereigns. It is said that when there was a run upon the Bank of England in 1765 the device was resorted to of paying the country people in shillings and sixpences. One acute Manchester firm painted all their premises profusely, and many dapper gentlemen were deterred from approaching the counter. A story is told of Cunliffe Brook's Bank. When there was an impetuous and unreasonable rush for gold, Mr. Brook obtained a number of sacks of meal, opened them at the top, put a good thick layer of coin upon the contents, then placed them untied where the glittering coins would be manifest to all observers. One bank procured a number of people as confederates to whom they paid gold; these confederates then slipped round again to a back door and refunded the gold, and thus the effect of a stage army was produced. At another bank the Chief Cashier himself examined every note with the most searching scrutiny, holding it up to the light, testing the signature, and making believe that, on account of alarm as to forgery, there was need of the most scrupulous care. When he had completed his pretended examination he handed the note to one of his subordinates very deliberately, with, in slow and measured terms: "You may pay it." Other plans were to pay the money very languidly, counting it twice over, so as to be sure the sum was right, and to give a sovereign short, so that the customer should complain and the counting have to be done over again. At one of the banks peck measures inverted were placed in the window facing the street, a pile of gold upon the top, after the manner of the fruit exposed to sale at street corners in the summer. At another the coin was heated in shovels over the fire in the parlor behind and handed out as "new" at a temperature of 300 deg. Fahrenheit. The clerk in charge, accommodating his phraseology to the occasion, cried out loudly every half-hour: "Now, Jim, do be gettin' on with them sovereigns; folks is waitin' for their money." "Coming, sir, coming," was the ready reply, and the "folk" thought the power of production boundless. It is always the simple-minded and the uninformed who constitute on such occasions the chief portion of the throng, just as the people who go to extremes are the half-educated ones. The crowd were easily persuaded—the proof that all was right was burning their fingers.—London Society.

—During the past season the soft-clam spawn has been so prolific in the Shrewsbury River, New Jersey, that the bottom of the river could not hold it. The consequence is an immense growth of small clams, varying from half an inch to an inch in length, lying so close to the surface that they have been washed ashore in immense quantities, and lie along the beach between high and low water mark in such numbers as to threaten disease, as they rapidly decompose. Thousands of bushels have been carted off the shore by farmers for fertilizing purposes.

BURNING COTTON.

The Weaving Room of the Janesville Cotton Factory Destroyed Last Night.

Loss Estimated at $30,000, Insurance $17,500.

The Building will be Rebuilt.

At one o'clock this morning an alarm of fire was sounded on the cotton factory bell, which was quickly taken up by the fire bells, and responded to by the entire fire department. The fire proved to be in the weaving room of the Janesville Cotton Factory, (or, perhaps, more properly, that portion of the factory built of wood, and located over the mill race.) This building, which is detached from the main brick factory, was entirely destroyed, together with its contents, consisting of two hundred looms, and a considerable stock of raw material and manufactured goods. The loss on the building, machinery and stocks is estimated at $30,000, upon which there is an insurance of $17,500. The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary.

Mr. Charles Preller, the night watchman, was the first to discover the fire. He had passed through the building about fifteen minutes before, within two or three feet from the place where the fire started. From this room he passed across River street to the brick building and to the office of the factory, locking the doors as he passed through, but leaving the fireman, Mike Donahue, in the weaving room, who also has keys to the building. From the office, Mr. Pulker went to the machine shop in the extreme south end of the brick building, where he met the fireman. While at the bench in the shop, he discovered the blaze, told the fireman to sound the alarm on the factory bell, himself rushing for the fire pump and hose, which he put in operation as quick as possible. While he was attaching the hose, Mr. Puffer, the foreman of the shop, came and took charge of the pump, and put a stream on the burning building. By this time the fire department arrived, and was promptly at work. The force pump of Barnes & Hodson's mill was also put to work, and nine streams of water were poured on the burning factory; but so rapidly did the fire run through the dry structure, it was very soon on fire in all parts, and crossed over to the wheel-house on the river bank, to the east. The firemen worked heroically, but at great disadvantage, as there were no approaches to the sides, the buildings being erected over the race, a distance of one hundred and twenty feet, with an iron roof; their work was consequently confined to either end. While the building was doomed to destruction, the great volumes of water poured into it from the steamers and pumps, compelled it to burn slowly, and it was not until five o'clock this morning that the orders to "take up" was given by the Chief Engineer, and the fire apparatus housed. The heavy iron roof, aided materially in confining the fire to the weaving room and wheel house, which otherwise might have spread to the mills and business blocks to the South, in the direction of which the wind was blowing. As stated above, the estimated loss is $30,000, upon which there is an insurance of $17,500, as follows; $9,800 on machinery; $1,200 on stock, and $3,500 on building. The insurance is distributed as follows:

WITH MARK RIPLEY'S AGENCY.

Underwriters Agency, N. Y.	$ 2,500
St. Paul Fire and Marine	2,500
Milwaukee Mutual National	2,500
Merchants, New Jersey	2,500
	$10,000

Upon the machinery $1,400 in each company; stock $600 in each, and on the building $500 in each.

DIMOCK & HAYNER'S AGENCY.

Northwestern National	$2,500
Buffalo German	1,500
Star, of New York	1,000
	$5,000

This amount is distributed upon building, stock, and machinery, but in what sums we are unable to learn.

J. G SAXE'S AGENCY.

National, of Hartford	$2,500

Distributed upon stock, machinery and building.

The building destroyed was built entirely of wood, (except the roof, which is of corrugated iron), upon piling over the mill race, extending 120 feet in length east and west, by fifty feet in width, and contained two hundred looms,—employing about fifty hands,—which was about one-half the weaving capacity of the factory. This part of the factory was completed and put in operation in 1876. It is the intention of the board of directors to run the main factory day and night, which will not materially decrease the amount of production of the factory, and as soon as the weather will permit, the destroyed building will be re-built.

FACTORY ITEMS.

—Night watchman Ed. Smith was the first to give the fire alarm at the engine houses this morning, he being on his beat near the engine house of No. 1, when he heard some one cry "fire," and upon turning to River street, discovered the cotton factory on fire. He took the alarm from Tim Sullivan, the man who attends the gas lamps on the West side. Officer Smith, after alarming the boys in the engine house, went in, and was the first to ring the fire bell, which he says, was the first to give the alarm to the public.

—Mr. G. R. Thompson, foreman of the Gas Company works, is generally one of the first ones out to a fire, it being one of his duties to attend fires, and take out the gas metres when it is necessary to remove them. He was a little late at last night's fire, or the fire was a little to quick for him, as to-day the Gas company are minus a fifty-light gas meter, which is valued at fifty-dollars.

—We understand that the hands employed in the weaving room of the cotton factory, which was destroyed by fire this morning, will be transferred to the weaving room of the main building, as night operators, and will thus be kept in employment.

—The river was full of cotton bats early this morning, most of which remained in the eddies below the dam for some time. They were washed out of the store-room in the wheel-house by the powerful streams of water from the fire steamers.

—About $1500 worth of cotton bats was stored in the wheel house of the cotton factory, most of which was destroyed, by the fire this morning. There was no insurance on building or contents. One of the wheels is somewhat damaged. but to what extent is not yet known.

—Owing to the disarrangement of the water wheels at the cotton mill, the machinery was at a stand-still to-day, but the main factory will, in all probability, be put in full motion to-morrow morning.

Death of George Howard.

We are informed by Mr. John Needham, that George Howard, of Magnolia, died at his home in that town on Saturday. Mr. Howard had been a prominent farmer in that town for many years, in which he settled in 1855. He was born in Herkimer county, New York, in 1830. In early life he worked on the Erie canal and on the Illinois canal. In 1852 he went to California, and returned in 1855 and since that time made Magnolia his home. In 1871, he was ordained minister in the Advent Christian church, and the same year was elected pastor of the church at Magnolia, and held that office to the time of his death. He was town clerk for two years treasurer for two years, and side supervisor two years, and for four years had been a member of the county board of Supervisors. He leaves a wife and a son and a daughter to mourn his loss. Mr. Howard was deeply respected by all who knew him. He was a man of unflinching integrity, and honored any position he was called to fill. His death will be sincerely mourned by a wide circle of friends.

Profit $1,200.

"To sum it up, six long years of bedridden sickness, costing $200 per year, total $1,200—all this expense was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife. She has done her own housework for a year since, without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know it, for their benefit.

Muldoon and Mulcahey.

As was predicted, Hyde and Behman's Comedy company met with a wonderful success at Myers Opera house on Saturday evening. The house was packed from the last seats in the gallery to the front seats in the parquet, and scores were compelled to stand during the three hours the tornado of laughter lasted. If the entertainment can not be called excellent in point of tone, it is certainly overwhelmingly popular with the masses, and will draw crowded houses every night in the week. The most sedate will laugh in spite of his or her pretended gravity, and will realy find as much enjoyment in it as the masses who can not appreciate anything but a variety show.

The company contains more good specialty people than any other comedy on the road. The Monumental Male quartette, was exceedingly good, and the Linn sisters gave some musical gems and were several times recalled. The special point of attraction is the Muldoon Picnic. From the time the curtain rises at quarter past nine till eleven o'clock, there is no "let up" in the laughter. It is one continual roar, and the more ridiculous the situations the more the laughter increases. John Gilbert as Muldoon, and John Hart as Mulcahey, are imcomparable, and can produce more fun in an hour and a half, than any two comedians on the stage.

Rock County Fair.

The officers and directors of the Rock County Agricultural society held a meeting in this city on Saturday last, and resolved to hold a fair in this city October 3d, 4th, 5th, and 6th, 1882. The directors instructed their secretary, Mr. W. T. Vankirk, to consult with the farmers, mechanics, and all others interested in the success of the exhibition, for the purpose of arranging a premium list that will be satisfactory to all. Mr. Vankirk informs us that he is now ready to hear the views of all such persons as have any propositions or suggestions to make regarding the compilation of the premium list. He desires the list to be complete and liberal in every particular and department, and propose, to have it completed at the earliest possible time. The premium list will be printed in a neat pamphlet, the work of which will be executed in the job department of the Gazette Printing Company.

—The HON. S. T. Merrill, of Beloit, was in the city to-day on business. He is not only a prominent manufacturer, but he devotes considerable time to the study of literature and the languages. He has a remarkable family of children, and all of them are more or less learned in the modern and ancient languages. Two of his sons who are thorough business men and mechanics, can each read the Bible in four languages—English, Latin, German and French. One of the daughters reads it in Greek, and we believe in Italian, and Mr. Merrill can read it fluently in English, French and Spanish. Every evening the Bible is read in Mr. Merrill's family in most of these languages. Mr. Merrill is one of the best informed men in the West on the savings bank system, and has written much interesting and valuable literature on that important subject. He has a daughter who is not only a good linguist, but has traveled much in Europe, and there collected many beautiful and valuable pieces of art.

—The careless management of gas came near producing fatal results at the home of Mr. Orion Sutherland on Saturday. The servant girl, who had only been in the family a short time, and Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland's little daughter, Cora, occupied the same room. Some times the daughter wanted a drink during the night, and Mrs. Sutherland requested the servant to supply the room with drinking water before retiring, ready for use if Cora should call for it. This was done, and although the servant professed to thoroughly understand how to use gas, she conceived the idea that it would save trouble and delay, if Cora wanted a drink, to have the gas turned on a little so that a light could be struck easily. When she retired after eleven o'clock, the light was extinguished and the gas turned on. She did not have occasion to awake during the night, and. When morning came she was in a state of stupor, and otherwise felt sick, and could hardly get, down stairs. Alarmed at this Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland went up stairs and found Cora in a much worse condition than the servant. The cause was soon discovered by Mr. Sutherland; and as quickly as possible Dr.-Judd was sent for, who administered emetics, and in a few hours the patients recovered.

Sunday Liquor Selling.

It seems now that our city officers are determined to put a stop to the selling of liquor on Sunday by the saloon keepers, and they are going to work in earnest. Sheriff Skavlem and Marshal Hogan run into the brewery, at the foot of Main street, yesterday afternoon, and found the bar room full of young men, who were boisterous enough, taking their beer. The officers have sufficient evidence to convict the proprietors, and a complaint will be made against them for violating the law, when they will have an opportunity to answer before the municipal court, and take the consequences.
